

Centre for Early Modern Studies Limerick

The Centre for Early Modern Studies at Limerick brings together scholars from the university of Limerick and Mary Immaculate College to further the study of the early modern world.

The Centre stimulates interdisciplinary engagement and seeks to enhance the environment for intellectual exchange between its members. The Centre also promotes postgraduate studies and postdoctoral research.

The Centre will draw on the wealth of material in the Glucksman's Bolton collection, and other collections, to promote early modern studies.

The launch of the Centre for Early Modern Studies, Limerick took place on 13 October 2016. The inaugural lecture was delivered by Professor Jane Ohlmeyer, Erasmus Smith's Chair of Modern History, Trinity College Dublin. Professor Ohlmeyer spoke on 'Ireland in the Early Modern World'.
