

UNIVERSITY of LIMERICK

OLLSCOIL LUIMNIGH

NISE

The National Institute for Studies in Education (NISE) was established in April 2014, as joint response to the recommendations of the Sahlberg 1 Report vis-a-vis the structure of teacher education in Ireland, and is a collaboration of the University of Limerick, Mary Immaculate College and Limerick Institute of Technology. The key aim of NISE is to develop and sustain closer collaboration between the partner institutions in the specific area of Education Studies.

The partnership between UL and MIC is at the core of NISE, which rests on mutual acknowledgment of each institution's shared as well as particular strengths in Education Studies, including teacher education, and an essential commitment by both to parity of esteem enabling them to maximise their collective capacity. In addition to UL and MIC, Limerick Institute of Technology (LIT) is also a member within this Institute structure in terms of its unique provision for Art and Design Education.

Prof Paul Conway – Director of NISE (Paul.Conway@ul.ie)

Sharon Barrett – Administrator of NISE (Sharon.Barrett@ul.ie)