DEGREE PROGRAMS

The interdisciplinary nature of our programs ensures that students get the foundations of their academic fields while also gaining the skills necessary to effectively confront career challenges. Because of our small student population, CSUMB serves students in ways that larger schools can't. Most classes have an average of 20-30 students and are taught by professors, not teaching assistants. This means students receive expert support while working through classroom content. Bachelor's and master's degrees at CSUMB are challenging, rewarding, professionally oriented, and fully accredited.

Degree-seeking international students fully integrate with CSUMB students in all classes and may live on campus with American or international students.
