Bachelor of Laws Evening Degree Programme

Bachelor of Laws Evening Degree Programme

I came to the UL School of Law as a mature student, with an established career in business and finance. I found the LLB Evening programme to be a really excellent experience covering a wide spectrum of legal areas from Criminal and Constitutional Law, to Commercial, Contract, Tort and European Law.

Without exception, every module covered proved to be engaging, absorbing and stimulating. Students are allowed to explore a wide range of legal issues with lecturers who are acknowledged experts and published authors in their respective fields. The schedules and materials are ideally suited, particularly for those with a busy work schedule.

I have benefitted greatly from taking the evening LLB Law degree at UL Law School. It has enhanced my business skills and also served as an excellent foundation for the LLM master's degree programme.

Students are expected to complete a final year project on a legal topic under the supervision of a faculty member.

Why choose the Bachelor of Laws Evening Degree ?

- The central objective of the programme is to provide students with the knowledge and skills ordinarily associated with a degree level legal education embracing legal knowledge, research ability, analytical skills, conflict resolution, conflict avoidance, critical evaluation, personal skills and legal ethics.
- All law subjects required by the Irish professional bodies, the Law Society and the King's Inns, are covered in full over the course of this programme.
- It offers great flexibility as all classes are scheduled in the evening time to suit those who are working.
- It is small group with an intake of approximately 25 students.
- The lecturers are given by faculty who are experts in their fields.
